

Certass. The Right Choice.

Certass is fast approaching its third birthday, having being licensed by the Government in April 2006. This allows us to offer window companies the opportunity to use an alternative to Fensa for self-certification and the issuing of building regulations compliance certificates. We are going from strength to strength, even celebrating reaching 1000 registered contractors at Glassex earlier this year. We also enjoyed the spotlight at the Ideal Home Show, Grand Designs exhibition in London and The Chartered Institute of Housing's show at Harrogate, all in the Spring of this year. This has helped push the Certass name into the limelight and has made more and more installers realise that there is an alternative available.

Certass has ensured, through regular feedback from our customers, that they are completely satisfied with the service we provide. Speak to any of them and they will assure you how easy our scheme is to use and how friendly and helpful our staff are. We will also provide you with a copy of the building regulations free of charge and note there are no mandatory training seminars to attend. For those of you who would rather have your Building Regulations Manual come in a hardback copy, we can also provide this for a small fee. Even replacement building regulation certificates are provided free of charge to your customers, as we all know keeping important documents in a "safe place" isn't always as reliable as we think. We feel that our main advantage is the fact that we do not charge separate annual inspection fees, on the condition that at least 31 jobs per membership year are registered to us. For the smaller businesses out there who may not reach 30 jobs per annum, the two inspections will still apply as dictated by our government license. Fortunately, our fees are still competitive in comparison to the alternatives available.

Savings can also be made on the cost of registering each installation. This is due to us having put together a package with a number of Insurance Backed Guarantee providers, who are prepared to pay these fees for you. Therefore in some cases using Certass for your building regulation certificates could cost as little as £50 plus Vat per year. If your preferred guarantee provider has decided not to participate in this scheme, the fees for registering individual installations are still extremely low.

For many installers your annual fenestration renewal is rapidly approaching and given the effect of the credit crunch we know you are also looking to reduce costs too, therefore switching to Certass makes sense. Why not see for yourself what you can save, call us today it's a very simple process. Make the right choice for your business and save both time and money.
